Exercise – Change from Past-Tense to Present-Tense

Exercise - Change the Past-tense short story below to the present-tense.

When my daughter was in university in Montreal Canada she was introduced to drugs in a very unusual way. She started doing volunteer work at a student theatre and was put in charge of conducting casting interviews and actor selection. She was sitting behind a desk doing interviews one-by-one. Late one afternoon a handsome actor-want-to-be walked into the room, he smiled, shook her hand, and was off to a good start. While she was interviewing him, she became suspicious that he might be high on drugs. She finished the interview, shook his hand, and told him that the casting decisions would be made in the next few days. Her suspicions were confirmed when he walked out of the room...carrying the chair he had been sitting on. My daughter sat there in astonishment.
